GLOBAL WARMING

Greenhouse Gas Emission + Greenhouse Gas Emission

Polluted city

When many of us think about climate change, we place responsibility squarely on the shoulders of big industry and transportation industries are the top greenhouse gas (GHG) contributors, it stands to reason that each individual is only contributing on a micro scale. When you add all of us together, along with the rest of the world, it becomes clear that if every individual made modest lifestyle changes each day, we could significantly slow the momentum of the planet's destructive warming trend. That's why you should consider creating an eco-friendly home and how to go about it. It only takes a few simple changes in your daily habits to do your part. Using Green Products, save energy and reducing waste are all environmentally beneficial tweaks anyone can make in their usual routines. Collectively, you and I have the power to stop contributing to climate change while we still have a choice.
